LARRY ARNAL

Photographer Larry Arnal, who has been photographing interiors and architectural projects throughout North America for more than 20 years, turned his lens on two spectacular homes for this issue. One, an Edwardian-era house in Rosedale, was renovated to be a neutral backdrop to the homeowners' extensive art collection. The other, a new build in Kleinberg, was designed to be a family home with an extraordinary interior design.

ROSE BARROSO

Custom home builder Rose Barroso is passionate about her work in the building trade, and she also enjoys sharing her knowledge and expertise. For this issue, Toronto Home drew on Rose's knowhow as a builder of luxury contemporary homes in a question-and-answer feature about exterior cladding on houses and how to choose the right ones.

KATHRYN GREENAWAY

Kathryn Greenaway danced professionally for 11 years before stepping away from the stage to study journalism. She's been a critic, feature writer and news reporter for the past 25 years and is a regular contributor to Toronto Home magazine. Kathryn says she learned an important lesson while writing for this issue about the main-floor transformation of a Mississauga home: "Think twice before you move," she says. "Elegant changes by skilled workers can make you fall in love with your old home all over again."

SUZANNE WINTROB

Writer Suzanne Wintrob admits that she can't draw a straight line, but that didn't stop her from starting painting classes last month. Instantly, she says, her world exploded with colour. "Skies are bluer, trees are greener and I think in words such as cadmium yellow and Alizarin crimson," she says. So Suzanne jumped at the opportunity to profile two artists for this issue: German rug designer Jürgen Dahlmans and Toronto abstract painter Janna Watson. Suzanne also writes for Financial Post and Financial Post Magazine.
